

Career Development Centre - the best solutions provider for hopeful immigrants to Australia

When time is slipping by and money matters much, the best option should always be the first solution. Hopeful immigrants to Australia will surely find the changes to the selection process for the General Skilled Migration (GSM) visa applicable from 1st of July 2012 a challenge. However the expertise of Career Development Centre (CDC) has already prepared itself to service their clientele with the best possible solutions.

The pass mark for visa subclasses will be at 60 points and there is now the benefit of upping your chances to reach the pass mark and get state nominated or be considered by employers for the employer sponsorship by submitting an 'expression of interest' (EOI) which can be well worked out through the expertise of CDC. The opportunity to continually enhance your EOI and gain the attention of potential employers this new facility is one that will better the chances of the qualified and 'target oriented' visa hopefuls. While being able to submit more than one visa subclass in the same EOI you can mark which you favour as 'preferred' to make your chances more efficient. This online facility can be accessed from anywhere in the world and can be thought of as a 'virtual asset' in this increasingly globalising world.

Your questions of 'what is an EOI?' and 'how can it work to my favour?' or 'how can it enhance my chances in the visa application process?' can be properly explained with expert knowledge and guidance by contacting CDC, one of the foremost leading migration agencies with over a decade long successful track record. The new GSM policy will allow holders of Degrees and Diploma level qualifications with work experience of 3-8 years to attend an initial eligibility test. CDC has already started accepting applications against the proposed GSM policy which means the race has already begun for some. Any client can rest assured that an application is in safe hands under 'expertise unsurpassed' when the CDC staff is at it as the latest most up to date information and knowledge about the process will be applied with guaranteed diligence and commitment.

An applicant who visits CDC will be convinced that his best 'one stop solutions' depot has been found. Your chances to succeed in getting selected from the EOI pool and how to select the most feasible visa options favoured by the new model can be revealed with high accuracy through the consultation services of CDC. Concerns of IELTS and other relevant matters can be discussed with ease and grasped insightfully.

CDC had a very successful streak with the Australian GSM policy from 2011-2012 with a remarkably high number of CDC clients getting selected. The success stories during this period made it one of the best ever business performances for the company. And now with an increased quality of service customised and made more efficient than before with the goal of achieving yet another successful stride the team at CDC is ready to as always look into every minor part of a client's application and ensure that all requirements are meant under the company's roof.

With information services for hopeful migrants about

Unees Samanthika Pathirage
(Managing Directress / Senior Consultant)

avenues to new destinations in the future, CDC gives its clients the benefit of meeting the challenge with experienced analytical skills with regards to criteria, occupation quota stipulations and so on. To get more details about CDC and its services, you may log on to www.cdclanka.lk or call the hot line-0777 846641. A client's success story is after all the company's testimony of its own worthiness; and CDC is prepared to continue their journey of success by achieving the next round of success stories by making dreams of flying to greener pastures come true.

Year 2012