Career Development Centre (CDC), the leading name in Australian migration consultancy wishes to inform hopeful migrants to Australia about a series of important updates which are crucial in the process of achieving their dream of a better life in greener pastures.

The Career Development Centre (CDC) sincerely hopes everyone is in the best of safety and wellbeing during this pandemic, which has now consequently created much new restructuring of business operation models for many across the globe. Therefore adopting new measures to overcome new challenges, the CDC wishes to bring to the notice of its valued clients that due to the precautionary measures that are needed to combat the Covid - 19 pandemic's spreading, and also as responsible citizens to adhere to the best practices of the government's guidelines for social distancing required at this period, all face to face in person interviews have been suspended. But the good news is that the CDC believes that the current 'corona situation' should not be a barrier for you to reach your dreams of reaching greener pastures. And in order to dutifully maintain our commitment to helping hopeful migrants to realise their hopes and dreams of beginning a new life in Australia, the CDC is now introducing a video call interview policy for new clients.

The CDC believes this new measure of video call interviews will serve to fulfil the fundamental requirement of the potential new applicants to be individually identified and for both the CDC and the applicant to build mutual confidence. Video call interviews can be conducted via Whatsapp or Viber which are now common communication apps used by many across Sri Lanka. However the CDC management wishes to stress on the fact that all interviews must be video call interviews and not voice call interviews which will then be no different than a phone conversation.

The need for visual identification of the applicant is of paramount importance for the CDC. Therefore all hopeful applicants are kindly requested to call Ms.

Ayodhya on 0112 823000 or 0112 823111 and make appointments for video call interviews with the Managing Directress and Senior Consultant of CDC, Mrs. Unee Samanthika Pathirage. However existing clients who have begun the process with CDC are welcome to communicate via email and phone calls with regard to their application matters and are not required to visit the CDC office.

Apart from the video call interviews, the CDC is now also adopting a digitalised process of offering reviews and assessments via online communication. As part of the new online digital processing policies, the CDC wishes to emphasise with great importance to the existing CDC clients as well as all hopeful migrants who plan to gain the services of the CDC, that registration with the CDC's Facebook account is now an absolute essential requirement. By searching for 'Migration Agents in Sri Lanka' a client can find the CDC Facebook page. As the leading name in Australian migration consultancy, CDC's clientele is growing significantly and therefore it is no longer practically possible for the CDC team to inform each client individually of the latest updates in the process for the various clients whose applications are at various levels in the process.

All updates will now be posted on the CDC's Facebook account and therefore that is why the company's management wishes to stress the importance for clients to get registered with the CDC Facebook account as a compulsory requirement to proceed with the application process. The latest news related to Australian migration, new plans and other updates that are relevant to existing clients and all hopeful migrants to Australia will be communicated via the CDC Facebook account as part of the complete online process.

All classes of migration visas to Australia were temporarily suspended due to the immediate stage of the Covid-19 outbreak in Australia, but now the system has once again resumed and therefore hopeful migrants are kindly advised to begin their application process immediately without any further delays. Even if the Australian migration authorities enforce a temporary suspension of visa issuance in the course of time, there is no need for an applicant to halt their application process. The applicant should continue with the process in order to be prepared to lodge the application when the system opens again. An application process takes about one year and therefore the sooner one commences the better in all respects.

The new intake will be in July and there is a huge rush that will be expected to happen due to the backlog that would have happened worldwide in application lodging.

IELTS classes provided via the CDC's network of instructors has not yet started but will resume soon. This will be an important update for all hopeful migrants as to begin preparing for this vital requirement of scoring the required marks in IELTS. CDC's website and the Facebook page will have all relevant updates in this regard.

Although most regions have suspended their migration visa in occupation categories, South Australia continues its policy. Health professionals are at the moment in better position to get selected. However this situation may change in the course of time and other professions will very likely see the demand lists give due preference to many other occupations as well.

Looking at the current situation of how Australia handled the Covid-19 outbreak in their country, it is quite clear that their government polices and administration were very effective in curtailing the situation from getting out of control. The Australian people have also shown remarkable willingness to observe principles of social distancing in a manner of discipline which has been helpful to contain the outbreak and put Australia on its track to a speedy recovery.

The world's economy is now showing signs of a recession in the west mainly centred on the economy of the US and Europe. However the situation in Australia is optimistic and therefore this shows that Sri Lankans who are looking to build their future in Australia can continue to bloom their hopes of realising their dreams.

Once again, while wishing all in Sri Lanka the very best to stay safe and well during this time of global pandemic, the CDC reminds its valued clients and all hopeful migrants that the diligent and committed team at CDC is always ready to ensure that the utmost will be done for those who wish to realise their dreams of migrating to greener pastures. The opening step is just a phone call away. Do not put your dreams on hold and let pessimism claim your day. Our commitment to serve you has never been more resolved as we are determined to not be discouraged by the grimness of the current world situation, and we will with maximum effort focus our strengths to help you realise your pathway to a golden future.
